This is a continuation of this previous post:

I know that this section might be confusing to some readers who may not understand Arabic very well or those readers who may not be able to read Arabic at all. If you are reading this post to find out about the history of Islam, then I will try my best to help you out. I have not read very much on Islamic History but I have read a lot of books about the Qur'an and Sunnah. We should always remember that Allah's Word is perfect and that his Book has no error whatsoever. If it says something, then it means it! Why do we argue so much over what is said in the Qur'an? Why do we argue so much about whether Muhammad was true or not? This type of discussion will never bring peace to our hearts because we are not discussing both sides properly. One side is trying to say good things about Muhammad (peace be upon him) and the other side thinks that all of Muhammad's messages are not true. The only way to settle this argument is for all of us to come together and discuss both sides of the story. Let us look at the history of Islam first. Let us read about some important events that have taken place in our history. After all, Islamic history is very interesting too. One of the most important Islamic historical events took place on July 16th, 622 A.D., when the family of Muhammad moved from Mecca to Medina . We all know why this was important. It was the beginning of the Muslim nation. The last thing that Muhammad wanted people to do is take part in war for nothing! Our Prophet, peace be upon him, warned non-Muslims not to try to fight Muslims because it would be for naught. He warned them that there would be no reward in it for them. So he gave them better ways of life and ways of worship that they could live by in order to get into paradise. However, the pagans did not listen to Prophet Muhammad's true teaching but they were too stubborn to listen and when they fought the Muslims, there was no reward for them when they were killed or captured or anything during war.
